as we see it

On our back cover last week you met Charlie Channelchaser, a frustrated type who was playing roulette with his TV set tuner. Seems he forgot to get his copy of TV GUIDE and didn't know what was on the various stations. Poor Charlie found himself frowned upon in polite TV circles.

Charlie has an equally unfortunate neighbor—Herkimer J. Standpat. Herkimer has memorized the times and channels for six or eight programs and those are the ones he watches. They were good enough four years ago, he insists, so they're good enough now. Herk hasn't watched a new show since his ten-inch set with the four-inch speaker was the latest thing.

We have nothing at all against shows that have been on the air for several years. A lot of them are as bright and entertaining as they were when they started. But we think Herk and his family ought to spare a look for some of the recent arrivals.

All of the networks have new offerings this season. These shows often are in competition with established favorites. If, after 13 or 26 weeks they attract some sort of audience, they'll stay on the air. If not, off they go.

Now, then, is the time for the television audience to vote on the many new programs on the air. The way to vote is to tune to the show. If you like it, keep tuning to it week after week. If you don't like it, stay away. Your "yes" or "no" vote will show up in the ratings.

The reason we don't like Herkimer J. Standpat is that he isn't doing his part, isn't voting, to help set the future course of TV programming. If everyone was a Herkimer, we'd get exactly the same programs year after year.

Moral: Try the new shows at least once before settling down with your favorites each week. You'll be casting a vote that may help decide whether the programs you think are worthwhile will stay on the air.

Those feudin' comics

Abbott & Costello: they didn't laugh.

Martin & Lewis: they whispered.

IT'S BEEN a long time since show business has been racked by a real personality feud. Back in the old days there was always the Pola Negri-Gloria Swanson set-to to keep the gossips happily engaged, but the girls these days don't seem to have time for such goings-on.

With television, however, the trend has been to the male side of the ledger. It began with the widely-publicized misunderstandings between Walter Winchell and Ed Sullivan, which erupt every few months or so.

What has not erupted into headlines, however, is the deadly serious mutual disregard which has developed over the past few years between Bud Abbott and Lou Costello on the one hand and Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis on the other—all four of whom appear on the Comedy Hour.

For that matter, it is more or less an open secret around Hollywood that the entire Comedy Hour roster last year was a solid mass of frozen-faced comics who went about the place plotting to push one another over the nearest cliff. Only Donald O'Connor, who is still too young to stay mad at anyone over any great period of time, managed to keep on decently civil terms with the rest of his confreres.

The Comedy Hour's anniversary show last season was a prime example of an atmosphere that would appal Dale Carnegie. It was inevitable, of course, that the sponsor would want to splash with its entire line-up of comics for this particular show.

Someone should have guessed what would happen when this particular crew of professional comedians was allowed to congregate in one place.

It being unthinkable to write any two of these acts into the same sketch, the only solution was to allot each of them eight minutes, separating them too, merely walked through their act, uttering not a single word. Martin & Lewis, seated in the middle of the theater, were carrying on an elaborate conversation in loud whispers with the hangers-on seated near them. Someone finally asked, "What's the matter with those two? They afraid you're going to steal their material?" The question carried right up to the stage, where Abbott and Costello were grimly going through their pantomime.

Lewis let the question sink in, then let fly. "What material?" he wanted to know. "Who wants it?"

When it came time for Martin and Lewis to run through their sketch, they tossed the script out of the window and did a merciless take-off of the Abbott & Costello routine, the lat-with commercials, station breaks and introductions. At the dress rehearsal, Hope opened the show with his usual monologue. He did not, however, read a single line. He just stood there and mumbled, not being willing to give the others the slightest clue as to what his material might be. As Hope mumbled on and on, Cantor suddenly arose from his seat in the front row and hurried to the back of the theater.

"Look, look!" he whispered frantically to the producer, shoving a stopwatch into the harried gentleman's face. "Hope's been on 11 minutes already!" The producer, who should some day hold down this country's top diplomatic post, calmed Cantor and got Hope out of there.

Next came Abbott & Costello. They, ter two sitting stonily in the front row, never moving a muscle.

On the show itself, however, it was Hope who blithely threw a monkey wrench into the carefully-timed hour. Ignoring the frantic wavings of the floor manager, he ran three minutes over his allotted time, which meant that one of the other four would have to make it up—and that naturally fell to Martin and Lewis, who had the misfortune to be holding down the closing spot. They had to chop an entire sequence out of their sketch—and the presentation of engraved silver trays to the individual stars from the sponsor was dropped entirely.

What really burned Martin and Lewis, however, was Hope's tip-off to the audience at the start that the zany comics were going to appear. There had been no advance publicity on the fact that Dean and Jerry would be aboard, the idea being for them to come onstage at the last minute as a complete surprise. Hope, however, poured cold water all over that happy little plan and Martin and Lewis have hardly spoken to him since. Just to top it all off, Hope answered a query after the show as to the whereabouts of Lewis' dressing room by saying, "He doesn't have one. They keep him in a cage."

An Unpleasant Incident

With Hope off the show this year and the genial Jimmy Durante coming in, the feuding should settle down to a relatively normal two-party freeze between the two comic teams. It all started back in the days when Martin was desperately in need of both jobs and money. Costello, the story goes, advanced him some cash and managed to get him one or two pretty fair singing jobs, in return for which Martin signed a contract giving Costello a rather stiff percentage of his future earnings.

Once he began to hit the upper brackets, however, Martin balked at the terms of the deal and Costello sued him. They settled out of court, Martin paying off in a lump sum of around $20,000, but the incident—if $20,000 can be considered such—has left a bad taste in all four mouths.

Feuding In London

A good deal of delayed-action fuel was poured onto the feud this past summer when the two played the London Palladium within two weeks of each other. Martin and Lewis drew a set of highly unfavorable press notices and got into a running quarrel with the British newspapermen. Abbott and Costello, following them two weeks later, rated highly favorable notices, many of them tinged with references to Martin and Lewis which were as uncomplimentary as the original reviews. Loaded with this kind of ammunition, Abbott and Costello can hardly be expected to let it just set there and be forgotten, and Hollywood is now waiting patiently to see who wants to start it.

The winners rush to thank the judges; Angie Dickinson has a hug for Groucho.

PICKING THE 1953 T-Venuses

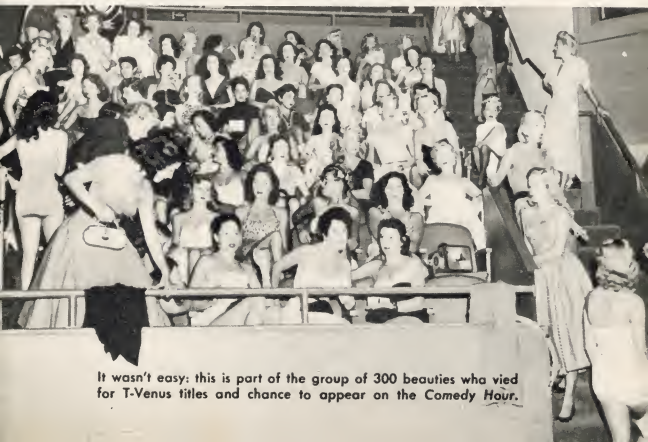
JUST how a girl goes about getting a foot on the TV ladder was demonstrated in Hollywood recently with the selection of the 1953 T-Venuses, six girls who will appear on NBC's Colgate Comedy Hour this season.

A neat combination of publicity stunt and serious business, the audition drew more than 300 applicants. The judges were Groucho and Harpo Marx and Jimmy Durante, comedy stars, along with Sam Fuller, executive producer of the show, and Howard Ross, talent coordinator. The job of picking six girls out of 300 took two-and-one-half hours.

The field first was reduced to 20, then to nine, and finally to six.

Chosen were: Mary Ann Edwards, 20, of Austin, Tex.; Dona Cole, 20, Canton, Ill.; Suzanne Ames, 20, Los Angeles; Angie Dickinson, 21, Kulm, N.D.; Dawn Oney, 22, Mankato, Minn.; and Sue Casey, 27, Los Angeles.



It wasn't easy: this is part of the group of 300 beauties who vied for T-Venus titles and chance to appear on the Comedy Hour.

It's an Easy Life

Panel Jobs A Pushover, Bill Cullen Reports

Panelmanship leaves plenty of time for Bill Cullen's hobbies.

WHEN BRITISH AUTHOR Stephen Potter wrote "Gamesmanship: How to Win Games Without Actually Cheating," he failed to mention a form of Gamesmanship that has become popular in the U. S. in the past six or seven years. This would be Panelmanship, or How to Make a Living Without Actually Working.

Being a Panelman isn't altogether easy. It helps if you know Bill Todman or Mark Goodson, who produce many TV panel shows. The second requirement is easier. You have to be a celebrity.

For our witness in behalf of the cause of Panelmanship, we introduce Mr. Bill Cullen. His credentials: Longtime employment on Where Was I?, a panel quizzer which expired after a year's struggle, possibly because neither Goodson or Todman had a hand in it, and permanent employment on I've Got a Secret, which Goodson and Todman do have a hand in and which consequently is successful.

"Not for a minute will I deny that being a panel member is a soft job," reports Mr. Cullen. "After you learn certain little things, it's just a matter of showing up on the night of the show, going through a quick warmup and then playing the game for a half hour. It's nice work.

"But there are a few things you have to remember. For instance, I'm sure that people out in Arkansas aren't interested in how many answers I get. I don't care if I get any right. So I play it for the laughs. I'm more interested in entertaining people than in getting more answers than the other panelists.

"Another thing I had to learn was that you have to pay attention to the questions the other people on the panel are asking. When I started out as a panel member, I was always thinking of some question I was going to ask, not listening to the others, and it would be very embarrassing when it turned out that somebody before me asked the same question. If you'll notice on I've Got a Secret, we all keep a piece of paper handy on which we record the questions the contestants answer 'Yes' to and the ones they answer 'No' to. It helps to narrow down the field and it also spares you the embarrassment of repeating somebody else's question.

"If you've ever noticed, and I think Arlene Francis on What's My Line? and I are the only ones not guilty of this, sometimes one of the panel members will say 'But you didn't answer one of my questions correctly,' after the game is over. There's no sense in going back like that and it only makes you look like a poor loser. I always try to remember that we are up there to entertain.

"One thing you positively must avoid is the intuitive guess. If I find by some mannerism or some slip that I know the answer without following a logical train of thought, I pass to the next panelist. If you guess right away, it ruins the game, and makes the show look phony."

Other than his skill as a panelist, Mr. Cullen's credentials celebrity-wise are also in adequate order. He's worked as a writer for Arthur Godfrey, and has been emcee on numerous radio and TV shows.

Bill started out as an all-night disc jockey in Pittsburgh, working for free, which is just the opposite of what he's doing now. He soon progressed to emcee of a variety show there, which spurred him to try his luck in New York.

But to get back to this Panelmanship business. Mr. Cullen does work sometimes as emcee on a couple of radio shows. And then he also runs an airline. But if you happened to be a member of an exclusive club in New York City, you could have seen Bill any afternoon all last summer on the club's roof, lying under the healing rays of the sun. Healing what? Well, Mr. Cullen once defined a good panelman as "Someone with an ability to think on his seat."

FINE TUNING

By OLLIE CRAWFORD

PRO FOOTBALL teams adopt "telegenic" uniforms. The Warner system is beginning to look more like Warner Brothers.

The boys will soon be forgetting the T-formation in favor of the TV-formation.

In TV football, the blocking back will be a guy who blocks everybody else out of the picture. Illegal use of hands will be waving to attract attention. The center will threaten to quit because he gets such an unflattering camera angle. A triple-threat is a guy who can run, pass, and keep his best profile toward the camera.

The quarterback sneak will be the play where the quarterback sneaks over for a close-up.

The pro football teams now have a new kind of unbalanced line with seven guys on the same side as the TV camera. With the ball on the five-yard line, the quarterback has to decide what he should do—run, pass, or Hamlet's Soliloquy. He can spend five minutes reciting: "TD or not TD, that is the question."

The extra points these boys are trying for are on their Hooper ratings.

In fact, one tough tackle said: "One more trick like that, boy, and I'll smear your pancake make-up."

Steve Allen: he's cool, but not crazy.

HIPSTERS, those people who make jazz their business, have been known to have at least slightly esoteric tastes. Thus it isn't too surprising to find that the current rage among the boys is a fanciful recorded retelling of that childhood favorite, "The Three Little Pigs." In this version of the story, the "cool" little pig, who builds himself a purple light shack out of clarinet reeds and Scotch tape, finally dispatches the big, bad wolf in a very tidy and newfangled way. He lures the wolf down the chimney and into a batch of hot water. Thus the wolf becomes the chief ingredient in a favorite dish, "cream of nowhere soup."

Replaced Hal Block

The author of this delicate little thing is a "cool cat" named Steve Allen, who in a gentler mood has been known to say some pretty funny things on Sunday nights on What's My Line?. Steve came in when Hal Block went out on that show and has adopted a grown-up approach to Hal's little boy act and in the process has become just about that show's leading laugh-getter.

Despite, or perhaps because of, his versatility, Steve still finds his talents relatively untapped by his network chores. Steve noodles around handsomely on a piano, but more often noodles around with words in a very compelling manner.

Steve is no man for the gag. He's a firm believer in spontaneous humor and his local night show in New York is full of it. He says, "Humor is a serious thing. It blossoms best in a relaxed atmosphere."

Thus on his own show recently, Steve, in a deadpan voice, read the lyrics of "Be My Life's Companion." It soon became evident that the lyrics were not written by Shelley, nor by anyone trying for immortality. Bob Hilliard, composer of the song, was slightly disturbed at having his work so well scrutinized, threatened to sue, and found there was nothing to be done about it.

Attended 16 High Schools

Out of New York City, by way of Chicago, California, and points West, Steve is 32 years old, and to the manner born as an entertainer, being the son of a couple of ex-vaudevillians. As a result of his parent's occupation, Steve's education was broad, including attendance at some 16 high schools.

His first big success came as a disc jockey in Los Angeles where his subtleties got through to the Angelenos. He came East in 1950 ready to conquer all via TV, but somehow he didn't quite come over. He's been a guest substitute for Arthur Godfrey several times and also starred on Songs for Sale. With his current popularity on What's My Line?, it may be that his hour is finally at hand.

Like two other gentlemen with horn-rimmed glasses on TV, Dave Garroway and Robert Q. Lewis, Steve is of an intellectual bent. He seems finally to be getting a highly favorable public reaction.

Here's a close-up of Steve's cuff link; the piano is for noodling.

Chicago Dateline

TV's Week: How's this for a Man On The Go vignette—behind the TV scenes? Program chief Alex Dreier needed a girl singer recently for a mood piece on his 9:45 PM Tuesday show on WNBQ. He picked an unknown, Hilda Henke, from an NBC kinescope, and created a "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes" setting around her sultry warbling. Payoff came a few days later when a Hollywood Ice Revue scout called. Would Miss Henke be available for a spot in their road company? Could mean the start of big things for Miss H. Now it looks as if Dreier has spotted another winner in Bob Lowery, a theater ticket-taker turned vocalist.

Dreier

You can expect WNBQ's Marcella Hein to be a steady visitor via TV. The gal who reads those Bible stories every Sunday morn was recently signed to a 52-week contract by NBC.

Add another Illinois TV station to the record. WCIA (Channel 3) plans to begin televising network shows Nov. 15. Station tower is at Seymour, 10 miles west of Champaign-Urbana and will service viewers in such towns as Peoria, Bloomington, Springfield, Danville, Terre Haute and Lafayette.

The big shakeup continues behind the scenes at WBBM-TV. Latest results: Set designer Jan Scott left for Gotham to join Garroway's forces. Announcer Chuck Bill is off the payroll. Ditto the promotion department's Dana Campbell, Jack Curry and Sam Eadie and production staffer Ed Lahey. WBKB's feminine commentator Kay Ashton-Stevens has joined Channel 2's program department with newcomer Russ Mayberry.

Uncle Ned Locke of WNBQ's Sunday Funnies show must hold some record for commuting. He flies in from Des Moines, Iowa, every week-end, then returns in time for Sunday dinner. In addition to his TV show, Uncle Ned also writes WNBQ's Jet Pilot show and holds down a full-time job as director of aeronautics for the state of Iowa.

What-Became-Of Dep't: Remember Gail and Gay Compton, the father-daughter team who were proprietors of WGN-TV's former Pet Shop? Gail and Gay are now readying Animal Fair, an outdoor show, for WITV in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. It'll be the first program of its kind when the station begins telecasting in late November.

New Shows: Choose Your Career, another panel idea, debuts Oct. 17 on WBBM-TV in the 3:30 PM spot. Aimed for high school students, the show will spotlight one vocation each week. Frank Reynolds has been tagged as emcee.

Paar

Shows in the Works: CBS is mapping a new Jack Paar musical show for daytime similar to Bob Crosby's new program which drew critics' praise.

Jimmy Spitalny, local charm school prexy, is offering his TV grooming session for career girls, Home of Charm, for Chicago consumption. Jimmy and his panel are awaiting a nibble from either WGN-TV or WBKB.

Advance Tips on Shows: ABC-TV execs claim the last half-hour of Don McNeill's Breakfast Club will be simulcast by no later than Jan. 1, 1954.

CHICAGO'S TV STARS

CAN YOU TELL WHO'S WHO?

1. Weight at one year, unknown. Now he scales in at 340 lbs.

ONE of the more amusing moments, sadistically-speaking, of Ralph Edwards' This Is Your Life program comes when the surprised guest, just recovering from the shock of being singled out for a public exposure, gets a second jolt. He's suddenly brought face to face with his own baby pictures which he had long considered happily lost.

In the case of stars and celebrities, guests often act quite horrified. Such old pictures are usually too revealing.

Chicago's TV stars are a more courageous lot. A number of them rifled their family albums for the old photographs shown on these pages. See if you can recognize your favorites as they were in diaper days. No names are given with these baby pictures, but the captions hold clues. Answers below but don't look yet.

2. Today thousands of tots call him "Uncle." He's seen at six months.

3. This four-year-old turned out to be quite an Irish tenor. On TV, he's busy in the A.M.

ANSWERS

1. Dick "Two-Ton" Baker; 2. Uncle Johnny Coons; 3. Danny O'Neil; 4. Angel Casey; 5. Kay Westfall; 6. Lee Phillip; 7. Carmelita Pope; 8. Toni Gilman; 9. Win Stracke.

5. Round-eyed, round-cheeked and alert at six months. This blond beauty has starred in the movies and in summer stock as well as on television.

4. An "angel" then as now. Only 16 months old, but quite a charmer.

The Wednesday night fights receive nearly perfect coverage in Milwaukee. Two of Milwaukee's three stations carry the bouts...With the baseball season over Russ Hodges resumed his duties as Pabst's fight commentator and Jack Drees (Russ' summer replacement) returned to full time chores as WBKB's top sportscaster.

Speaking of boxing, mark your calendar for Oct. 21 for a corking good fight. WBBM-TV will televise the world's middleweight championship between Randy Turpin and Bobo Olson. England's Turpin, a partly deaf, methodical boxer who once whipped Sugar Ray Robinson, should be favored to flatten Hawaii's Olson.

Turpin

Chicago Pontiac tycoon Pete DeMet is sitting on the proverbial hot seat. DeMet toyed with the idea of switching his Sunday night first-run films to live telecasts of Black Hawk hockey games —if a TV GUIDE poll indicated fans preferred seeing hockey to watching films.

Since we mentioned it, our mail has been 100% pro hockey. However, technical complications prevent DeMet from making the switch. But, says DeMet, if another sponsor wants to televise hockey, he would gladly move to a new time slot to make room for it.

Cuffnotes: WBKB's exercise-demon—Ed Allen—still marvels at TV GUIDE's celebrity golf champion Frank Pope. "I played with him in 1951, when Pope shot in the 90's," says Allen "and now look at him. A champion and shooting in the 70's."...In Milwaukee, WCAN-TV star and Marquette University grid coach Lisle Blackbourn is still taking plaudits for the Hilltoppers' fine stand against Wisconsin while losing 13-11.

Classic Grid Games Aired Over WMAQ

by WM. A. QUE

All you sports fans! Got pigskin fever? Probably you have now that the season has gone through its early stages.

Around these parts (where the best players originate and the best brand of football is played) we're getting a good idea of who the powerhouses are and how the conference races may wind up.

Joe Wilson

The great majority of fans in this section generally belong in one of two ranks —Big Ten adherents or Notre Dame followers. No matter which of these you may be, it's safe to venture the guess that you want to see or hear the top sectional game of the week.

Let me tell you how to do that and satisfy your craving for top football action. Either buy a ducat and head for the stadium OR stay home and follow the game by radio.

Set that dial to 670 any Saturday afternoon and you'll get Joe Wilson's capable play-by-play description... it's the next best thing to being at the scene in person.

Here's a list of the games to be broadcast over WMAQ as a public service by Motorola:

Oct. 17—Wisconsin vs. Purdue
Oct. 24—Georgia Tech vs. Notre Dame
Oct. 31—Notre Dame vs. Navy
Nov. 7—Illinois vs. Michigan
Nov. 14—Michigan State vs. Mich.
Nov. 21—Illinois vs. Northwestern
Dec. 5—Notre Dame vs. Southern Methodist.

And stay tuned to WMAQ preceding and following the game for the Pre-Game Warmup and the Football Scoreboard.

4:00 2 OMNIBUS
Alistair Cooke presents "King Lear" by William Shakespeare.
Act I: King Lear, doddering monarch of Britain, retires and divides his kingdom between his daughters, Goneril and Regan. In a rage he has cast out his third daughter, Cordelia, unaware that she is truly honest and good. Cordelia marries the King of France and Lear arranges the marriages of his two wicked daughters and arranges to live with each of them in turn. Meanwhile, Gloucester, another wrong-headed ancient, is deceived by his illegitimate son, Edmond, into thinking that his legitimate son, Edgar, is plotting against him.
Act II: Lear arrives at Gloucester's castle where Regan and her equally evil husband, the Duke of Cornwall, live. Lear comes to realize that his two scheming daughters are allied against him. Sick at heart, and accompanied by his court fool, he staggers out into the stormy night.
Act III: Lear and his fool take refuge in the shelter of a talkative half-wit, Tom O'Bedlam. But Tom is really Edgar (Gloucester's good son) in disguise. Gloucester appears and warns the king, who by this time has gone mad; that his evil daughters are planning to kill him. Meanwhile, Edmond, the illegitimate son of Gloucester, convinces the Duke of Cornwall that Gloucester has been helping Cordelia and her husband, the King of France, in an attempt to invade England and seize the throne. In retaliation the sisters blind Gloucester. Cornwall is in turn stabbed to death by Gloucester's servant.
Act IV: Edgar and Cordelia find their respective fathers wandering through the countryside. Compounding the vice of the sinful sisters is their adulterous lust for Edmond. Goneril's husband, the good but ineffectual Duke of Albany, denounces her for her cruelty to Edmond. Edmond becomes head of the English forces resisting the French invasion.
Act V: The classic is concluded with most of the characters deceased.

Imogene Coca

SHY-TYPE STAR

IT IS A MATTER of record that among the extroverted stars of television, the introverted Imogene Coca considers herself a second-hand glowworm suffering with paralysis of the glow. No less a man than Your Show of Shows producer-director Max Liebman is the authority for the statement that Imogene Coca is "genuinely unaware of her importance as a star."

He discovered her when he was directing entertainment at a resort in the Catskill Mountains. He took her out of the Ruban Bleu in New York in 1949 and put her into the original Admiral Review, forerunner of Show of Shows. And he's been her show-business father ever since. What he doesn't know about Imogene Coca is hardly worth knowing.

"On top of her innate shyness," Liebman goes on, "Imogene has spent virtually her entire career in and around New York City. Everybody in the theater knows her and therefore pays no inordinate amount of attention to her. She spends her days rehearsing at our 56th Street rehearsal hall. Evenings she either stays home or goes out to the theater. Nobody bothers her. And being an introvert herself, she never seeks out new friends. She's lived an insular life. And she quite honestly has no conception of what the name Imogene Coca means to the viewing public."

It is possible, however, if not probable, that Imogene's recent summer vacation in Hollywood may have opened her eyes to some small degree. Comfortably settled in the beautiful old Milton Sills home in suburban Brentwood with her husband, Bob Burton, she sallied forth to the Greek Theater one evening early in July for the opening night of the New York City Ballet. She had no sooner stepped out of her car than three photographers had her surrounded. A little startled, she held still for the pictures. A young boy came up to her and asked for an autograph. A woman asked if she wasn't Imogene Coca.

This had rarely happened in New York, a town which takes its local celebrities pretty much in stride. As does Hollywood, for that matter. But let a New York celebrity show his face in Hollywood, or a Hollywood personality set foot in New York, and all sorts of ego-nourishing things can happen.

During the following week, virtually every correspondent in town—and there are 400 of them—had put in a bid for an interview with Imogene. "I don't get it," she kept saying plaintively. "What on earth do they want to talk to me for?"

Recognition At Jack's

But it was an evening at Jack's-at-the-Beach, a popular out-of-the-way seafood restaurant on the Los Angeles coast, that really shook her to her foundations. She and her husband and two friends arrived there at 9 o'clock one Thursday night, bent on a quiet evening away from Hollywood. They had no reservation and the place was jammed. More than 200 people had already been turned away. They could have a table in perhaps half an hour.

The four of them withdrew into the shadows just outside the entrance to have a conference. "It's all my fault," Imogene said. "I made everybody late." (Imogene has a guilt complex. She feels guilty about everything that goes wrong, regardless of whose fault it might be.)

They were about to give up and go look for another place when Jack himself, the restaurant's voluble Greek owner, excused his way into the little group.

"'Scuse me," he said, peering at Imogene through the darkness, "but what is your name, please?"

Imogene, who hates to give her name for the simple reason that she's afraid she might either forget it or mispronounce it, blurted it out.

Jack erupted like a volcano. "Miss Coco!" he beamed. "It can't be. I read in the papers you are coming to California and I hope against hope you come dine with us. We never miss your show. The dressmaker scene. Mama call me in from the kitchen.

Lady with a guilt complex: 'It's really all my fault. I made everybody late.'

'Ma and Pa Kettle in Brentwood.' Stars are Mr. and Mrs. Bob Burton and poodle.

'She's on, she's on!' she yell at me. Mama!" he yell himself. "Mama! Come see! I am right! It is Miss Coco!"

"Miss Coco" at this point had shrunk up against the wall trying to climb into the brick itself and disappear. Mama, a little more restrained than her jovial husband, clucked and cooed and said how nice. Imogene forced herself back into existence but was wholly incapable of opening her mouth. Jack, beaming like a proud father, personally led the way to a table for four. The other patrons stared. By the time Imogene was seated, she was ready to die quietly and have done with it.

Doesn't Believe Compliments

After Jack had left and she finally recovered, Imogene made a cogent observation, a hint that she might just possibly be starting to catch on. "Somebody once told me," she said thoughtfully, "that paying me a compliment was like taking a cold shower. Sometimes I think maybe he might have been right."

Whoever said it was dead right. It's not that Imogene doesn't appreciate compliments. She just doesn't believe them. Years of being flat broke and unable to get a job, even though she had just as much talent then as she has now, have given her the uneasy feeling that something is wrong somewhere. When people tell her she's great, she keeps wondering why nobody knew it during the lean years when she could have used a little of it.

Said lean years started when she was eight years old and broke into vaudeville as a tap and ballet dancer. She turned comedienne more or less by accident when someone saw her doing a "fan dance" with a polo coat backstage when she was just another face in a New Faces review. But even after she stopped taking her dancing seriously, and drew laughs in shows and night clubs, she could hardly afford to summer in Brentwood. That came with television.

It is still one of the great paradoxes of show business that this girl who can clown so uninhibitedly with Sid Caesar before 20,000,000 people quakes like a frightened doe at the very thought of meeting a stranger.

Next to show business, her great passion in life is pets. She's had them all, from dogs through cats to a skunk.

During this past summer, she bought two ducks and installed them in the swimming pool. She had always wanted a duck. Being Imogene, she got stuck with two, one of them a cripple and inseparable from the other.

"Ma and Pa Kettle come to Brentwood," Imogene put it plaintively one summer afternoon. The ducks were waddling about the lawn. Apry, her white poodle, was chasing a ball.

Papa Liebman: 'Imogene is genuinely unaware of her importance as a star.'

Three NBC photographers were setting up their equipment for a series of color shots. Two magazine writers were eyeing one another with ill-concealed suspicion. An independent photographer sat by the pool, patiently waiting for the NBC men to finish. Bob Burton was on the phone, trying to discourage someone else from dropping in for the afternoon. Pat Horne, one of last season's Hamilton Trio dancers, was trying to get a word in edgewise with Imogene. And Imogene, who isn't happy unless she's feeling guilty about something, was feeling guilty about what the neighbors must be thinking.

It is considered doubtful that she will ever understand that the neighbors are still bragging that Imogene Coca had spent the summer in their neighborhood.—Dan Jenkins

Against backdrop of Washington, Utah delegation discusses problem for TV film.

TV for Congressmen

Senate and House members star on own video 'shows'

NOT SO LONG AGO, U. S. Representative William S. Hill, of Colorado, walked down the main street of his home town to the warmest reception he had ever received. Constituent after constituent stopped him to say how much they had enjoyed his first TV show.

Such friendly recognition, often by complete strangers, is a new and warming experience which Hill is sharing with quite a few of his colleagues in the House and Senate. They admit they owe it all to television. This powerful medium is making their faces, voices and mannerisms familiar in millions of homes. Before television, most members of Congress could walk through their districts at high noon, completely unrecognized.

This situation is being changed by the Joint Senate and House Recording Facility, where every member of Congress may become a TV star—happily pontificating on the state of the Nation, commenting on crops and Korea, discussing mail, or answering questions of his own selection.

It was just before the National political conventions in Chicago, that Congress officially voted approval of a television adjunct for its highly successful operation of making recordings for radio stations.

It was tough going. Every Congressional district had radio stations, but relatively few had TV stations in the spring of 1952, and the legislators were doubtful about the innovation.

But they approved the adjunct and, today, with TV spreading rapidly into every nook and cranny of the Nation, Congress can't imagine how it ever got along without it.

The operation is small, efficient, inexpensive and—best of all for the taxpayers—self-supporting. It produces 16mm sound films for use over television, with each member paying for his own.

The combined radio-TV operation is run by Robert Coar, one-time electronics expert in Hollywood, and his wife, Helen.

The Recording Facility has its television studio on the ground floor of the Old House Office Building and includes a processing laboratory in the basement. In addition to the Coars, the setup includes one cameraman, one editor, one laboratory specialist, and one sound man who can also handle a camera. The TV studio has three cameras on stands and one hand-held unit.

Lyndon Johnson, of Texas, Democratic leader of the Senate, does a regular, weekly, 15-minute TV show with guests who are usually fellow Senators or important figures in the Administration. It is give and take discussion, with time set aside for Johnson to answer a few letters from constituents.

Senators Everett M. Dirksen and Paul H. Douglas, both of Illinois, share a 15-minute period, although the former is a conservative Republican and the latter a New Deal Democrat. Each makes an independent six and one-half minute show, without advance knowledge of what the other is doing. Then the films are spliced.

The Utah members in Congress have one of the most unusual programs. The entire delegation—two Senators and two Representatives—takes a name guest to breakfast. Usually, it's someone like Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson or Secretary of Welfare Oveta Culp Hobby. Then they go to the studio to do a 30-minute TV film for Utah.

To get a thoroughly professional touch to her make-up chores, Mrs. Coar recently went to Hollywood at the invitation of the motion picture industry. She studied under Hal King, of the Max Factor organization. King, as you probably know, is not only a make-up artist on movie lots but also for such filmed TV shows as I Love Lucy.

King's normal job is to make men and women look more glamorous. Mrs. Coar was after something entirely different. Her goal is to make members of Congress appear more natural and wholesome. That's the way the folks back home like their politicians to look.

Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., views finished film after appearing with Congressmen.

Reviews

The Paul Winchell Show

PROGRAM OF THE WEEK

FRED ALLEN and George Jessel both preceded Paul Winchell on the air with shows that failed to take advantage of their unique capabilities. Now it's the ventriloquist's turn to suffer from a format with which he should never have been inflicted.

As a ventriloquist, Winchell is certainly one of the best, if not the best, in the business. The way he breathes life into his sidekick, Jerry Mahoney, turning the oversized splinter into a living personality, attests to his genius. But even Winchell, with his flair for comedy and his dramatic talents, must have a story line which will hold up. And this Winchell doesn't have.

The show (NBC) never seems certain which direction it should take. It opens each week with a comedy skit featuring Winchell and Mahoney, then there's a heavy dramatic sequence completely unrelated to the comedy. It then cuts back to another comedy skit. As a result, viewers are expected to start out laughing, switch abruptly in mood to serious drama, then laugh again. It's all too much of a mish-mash.

The dramatic sequence represents an innovation this year. It's long been known that Winchell nurtures a secret ambition to be a dramatic actor, and he gets his chance on this show. He scores solidly, leaving no doubt about his versatility. He has held his own with such stars as Maria Riva and Sir Cedric Hardwicke. The dramatic inserts, incidentally, are kinescoped a week in advance, which gives Winchell more freedom for live comedy sketches during air time.

The quiz feature which turned Winchell's show last year into just as much of a melange fortunately has been eliminated. Sinclair and Spaulding, the dance team, are still on hand for a welcome musical interlude on each show. But the writing and format are pedestrian.

Format trouble: Paul Winchell with his sidekicks, Jerry Mahoney and Knucklehead.

THE BOB CROSBY SHOW

Music by day: Joan O'Brien, Bob Crosby, Paula Kelly.

DAYTIME television is receiving a much-needed face lifting with the new Bob Crosby Show. After watching soap operas, giveaway programs and similar items through most of the day, the housewife audience must certainly welcome a half-hour program devoted almost entirely to good music and light-hearted fun such as Crosby and his crew dispense (CBS, Monday through Friday).

Please note, though, that we said "devoted almost entirely." The producers, apparently on the assumption that only they know what's best for a daytime audience, have seen fit to bog down the program with audience participation games and stunts. After all, if the show wasn't burdened with such antics, it might rate a regular nighttime period on the network. Luckily, the stunts are held to a minimum and interfere with the show only during the time they're on camera.

The show has much of the pleasant conviviality which sparked Crosby's long-time radio favorite, Club 15. Bob Crosby has made it a point never to trade on the reputation of his older brother, Bing. But there's no denying that he has much of Bing's charm, audience savvy and way with a song. When he's singing, joking or just gabbing with the rest of his cast, the program is at its best.

He's been given some good supporting talent. The Modernaires, a vocal group fronted by pretty Paula Kelly, is one of the best and punches over its tunes nicely, either alone or with Crosby. Joan O'Brien, a newcomer to TV, is featured girl vocalist and Crosby's vis-a-vis. She's good. Steve Dunne, the announcer who emcees the audience games, is too obviously bored and dejected with his enforced role. But away from the games, he joins in the fun with the rest of the cast.

CBS has dug deep into its budgetary pocket to make this one of the better daytime programs. While the sets are not lavish, they put to shame some on other daytime shows. And Crosby and the singers get the backing of his full-sized orchestra, known as the Bobcats.

Fall Suits call for COLOR

Julia Meade finds suits provide the best answer in her busy television schedule.

AS EVERY television actress, working woman and housewife knows, suits are the mainstay of a wardrobe. Julia Meade, a very pretty girl who fits all three of these categories, who does the commercials for Ed Sullivan's Toast of the Town and is seen on many of the top TV shows (Kraft, Suspense, Philco), models one of the newest suits.

She says she likes suits because they can be dressed up or down to meet the occasion. For the busy woman, she feels that a suit requires the least amount of attention . . . a few simple tailored or dressy blouses, a necklace, or earrings, and on a moment's notice, no matter what the invitation calls for, she can be well dressed.

Julia wears a red and black nubby tweed suit-dress with jet button trim and black velvet collar and cuffs. She effectively demonstrates that red is the color for all women—brunettes, blondes or even redheads. Although the tendency of this primary color is to overwhelm the wearer, in this suit-dress by Grabois the color is subdued with black. Over a period of time, most women will find this less tiring than the unrelieved drama of stark red.

And to prove that the tailored look can also have a pretty look, Julia's wardrobe includes a lined black and white tweed suit, by Bass-Feit. This has a straight skirt and simple, classic tailoring. For all-around wear, for day, evening, and those times when her plans are uncertain, Julia says, "This is for me."

The Curveball?

RED SMITH HAS THE LAST WORD

By Red Smith

MR. GUY LEBOW, second vice president of the Sports Broadcasters Association complains that an "unwarranted, crass and unsolicited attack" has been made here upon his wordy tribe. Crass means gross, stupid, thick or coarse. My goodness but he's mad and all that was said here was that baseball broadcasters were fakers. As the discerning John McNulty wrote in a different connection, "people are damn touchy these days being called what they are."

The trifling monograph which aroused Mr. Lebow contended that, (a) a man sitting in the radio or television booth away up under the grandstand roof could not recognize a slider, a palm ball, a fork ball, a screwball or a knuckleball if it hit him between the eyes, (b) he is faking when he describes a pitch as a slider, fork ball, etc., (c) knowledgeable baseball fans know he is faking and hearing him chatter about sliders, etc. wonder whether they may believe anything he says.

Mr. Lebow replies that because he is sitting a long way from the plate the announcer can see the pitch "after it has sunken" (the tense is his not mine) and a process of "logicalizing" enables him to identify it. Not having been indoctrinated in the art of logicalizing one is at a loss to answer this argument.

It was remarked here that it must require extraordinary eyesight to see and recognize a slider because baseball men cannot agree on what a slider is and many of them question whether it exists at all. Ask ballplayers about the slider and one says it's a pitch that looks like a curve but isn't and another says (with magnificent disregard of all physical laws) that it's a curve which starts to break and then straightens out and so on.

In his rebuttal, Mr. Lebow does not pretend that announcers can recognize the sliders they describe so glibly over the air. He only undertakes to argue that the slider does exist. Toward this end he quotes a statement by Frank Yeutter that Jim Konstanty is a fine slider pitcher and reports that Frank Frisch once discussed the slider with Rogers Hornsby on television.

Frank Yeutter, a Philadelphia sports writer, is an old and dear friend who knows as much about sliders as I do and somewhat less than Frank Frisch does. Not having heard Mr. Frisch's televised comments on the slider, one can only imagine what they were.

Smith

It can be said recklessly that Mr. Frisch is as keen a baseball observer as Mr. Lebow. Mr. Frisch's eyesight was good enough to give him a batting average of .348 against some of the greatest pitchers that ever lived. Mr. Frisch admits candidly that he does not know what a slider is and the most casual mention of the pitch brings animal cries from him.

He cannot forget the time a monstrous home run was hit off one of his pitchers when he was managing the Pirates. "What's he hit?" Frank asked when the inning was over. "That," said the pitcher "was my three quarters slider."

"How less ominous," Mr. Lebow writes, "the average announcer would have been made to seem if Mr. Smith had admitted that the practice of calling pitches originated with the great sports writers many years before the invention of radio, instead of being passed off as a poisonous brew dished up to make you, the viewer, more susceptible to beer or cigarets."

There was never any disposition here to describe announcers as "ominous" (having the significance of an omen) and people are already so susceptible to beer that they get fried on it. If the rest of the sentence has any meaning, Mr. Lebow will have to explain it. On the radio, words need no meaning. Their purpose is to substitute for an orchestra.
